a desired location between a first facing layer and a layer of a polymer based blanket material including polymer binding fibers; and molding said insulator precursor into a desired shape by;

heating said insulator precursor;
applying pressure to said insulator precursor; softening only those polymer binding fibers present in at least one selected area of said polymer based blanket material; and crimping said at least one selected area.

A